

both members of Kicken' Chickens. Their parents said they left New York in part so their children could learn the responsibility of caring for animals, and like many 4-H parents they see chickenkeeping as a way of interesting their children in something other than video games and computer screens.

Gene, who is vice president of the club, displayed an impressive depth of interest and knowledge as he talked about his chickens; explaining the breeding of his Blue Wyandotte bantam, Flake, for example, he said that for genetic reasons, "you have to breed a black and a blue."

"If you breed two blue ones," he said, "you won't get blues," but mostly blacks.

Gene, although nervous about picking his chickens up, stroked and kissed them gently on the back of the neck once he got a good hold.

Both boys clearly love their birds, as was evident from the way they talked about them. "I took eggs to school and hatched one and took it to all the classrooms, which I wasn't supposed to do," Gene said of a chicken named Peeps, whom he called his favorite.

"She was named after the yellow marshmallow candy," Christopher said.

Peeps came to an untimely end, as do many chickens (whose normal life span is seven to eight years). The exposure to death as well as birth seems to be an important part of the educational experience.

One winter day Peeps was found frozen on the ground near the ramp to her straw-lined box, and fatal raccoon and opossum encounters are common even in the backyards of suburbia. Karen Unrath, the secretary of the American Bantam Association, a group for keepers specializing in the smaller birds, said her son Dieter's favorite bird was killed recently when the pen door shut on it.

"There was a lot of crying," she said, "and much of it was mine."

Robert Powell, the district director for the mid-Atlantic states of the American Poultry Association, was the poultry judge at the fair. He patiently explained every detail of the process to the children, who listened intently. Chickens are given marks of 1 to 4, with 1 being the best. There were few 1's, but no 4's.

First Mr. Powell took a walk around, observing the birds. Then he removed them one by one and gave his critiques. Chickens that were skittish lost points, but Mr. Powell tried to be encouraging: "This bird has a bright future," he said of one obstreperous but comely hen. A chicken that was tame and did not object to being taken out of its small cage was praised, as was its owner.

"This is really hard," Mr. Powell said at one point. "To have three to five birds of this quality in such a small show is remarkable." He held up one hen — a red, white and tan Buff Brahma bantam — and said that it could win in a show with a thousand entrants.

Despite the stiff competition, Gene and Christopher received blue and red ribbons for their birds. "She's happy to be here," Mr. Powell said of Christopher's Black Wyandotte bantam, Ashes. "I can tell she is a superior bird just by picking her up." Flake, he said, was "very well taken care of, very clean."

The best in show trophy went to the Buff Brahma bantam. She was one of the most beautiful creatures I have ever seen, and I found myself fascinated by her.

When I write about plants for this newspaper, I inevitably become so excited that I buy a few from mail-order sources. But I was determined to not let that happen with chickens, which I have successfully resisted keeping even as my neighbors have fallen one by one under their spell. Although I am a sucker for most animals, sharp beaks and leg spurs scare me, and I have always found chickens to be ... well, not very bright. When I hear an enthusiast claim that they have wonderful personalities, I chalk it up to the mania of a zealot.

Even so, when I went to visit the Boves and was asked if I wanted to handle a six-week-old chick from the last "hatch," the avian equivalent of a litter, my heart melted.

The little hen went home with me in a cardboard box, and she is really quite bright. She is a mutt rather than one of the fabulous breeds I saw at the fair, but I do find myself imagining a rustic Adirondack chicken cabin for her, or perhaps a miniature chalet. I have yet to name her, but for now I call her Peeps.

Birds of a Feather Flock to Their Clubs, Including One Called Cluck

MARTHA STEWART has single-handedly turned "fancy," or show, chickens into celebrities, particularly her South American Araucanas, which lay muted blue or green eggs.

But the birds have other advocates, including national organizations much like the kennel clubs that run dog shows, including the American Poultry Association and the American Bantam Association, which promotes the one-quarter-size chickens that have become trendy among suburban chicken-keepers.

"Our membership continues to grow, as does attendance to the shows," said Ric Ashcraft, the secretary and treasurer of the poultry association, referring to small club shows, national competitions and state fairs. The group provides judges for some 1,000 shows a year. The giant annual show, the Ohio National, held in Columbus each November, may have as many as 15,000 avian entrants.

Groups like the Poultry and Bantam Associations are dedicated to preserving the integrity of heirloom breeds, which may number as many as 400. Many of these are very old indeed, like the Polish breeds with fountains of feathers atop their heads whose forebears were depicted in ancient Roman paintings.

And all of them are striking. Consider the Phyllis Diller mane of the Mottled Houdan bantam pullet (shown at upper left) or the ball of bleached cotton candy that is the Bearded White Silkie bantam pullet (upper right). The fawn-colored Bearded Buff Laced Polish large fowl hen (lower right) wears a pompadour, and the Silver Spangled Hamburg Large Fowl Hen (lower left) is wrapped in drop-let-shaped velvet-black splashes.

Karen Unrath, the secretary of the American Bantam Association, is adamant about the importance of maintaining these heirloom breeds and not allowing birds to mingle and produce mutts.

"It's like raising condors," she said. "There won't be any if we don't breed them."

As serious as the promoters of show chickens are, there is one big difference between their culture and that of show dogs: award-winning chickens typically sell for $25 to $35, as opposed to the thousands of dollars that a prize Pekingese or English water spaniel might bring. Even the trophy winners at the Columbus fair rarely fetch more than $200.

And would-be chickenkeepers just starting out can buy fancy chicks from a hatchery like McMurray, in Webster City, Iowa, for less than $3 each. (Express shipping is extra.) In fact the low cost of chickens, and the relative ease of maintaining them, is a big part of what makes them so attractive to amateurs.

Still, even those who promote chickenkeeping offer caveats. G. W. Winborn, the founder of Cluck (the Cooperative League of Urban Chicken Knowledge) in Dallas, warns of the risk of disease and recommends buying them through reputable dealers to minimize it.

And like many of his fellow enthusiasts, Russell Masker, the leader of the Sussex County 4-H program's poultry club in New Jersey, worries about an increase in local ordinances against backyard livestock, including chickens. (Some places, he added, ban only roosters.) "Nothing happens until someone complains," he said with obvious irritation. "People move out here to get away from the city and then complain about the noise."

06-04-06-1 Family History papers

Very gratifying progress in the past few days at preparing genealogical materials to be incorporated into the SRP master copy of the family history papers. I will continue, on a daily basis, to do so as much family history as possible. Several hours daily would be very gratifying. The important thing is that the process has begun again in earnest. The central realization / stimulus is this: there is a lot of material available to me at present which, if not incorporated by me during my lifetime, will probably "fall through the cracks," so to speak, and not be incorporated into this opus that I have been working on for about 30 years. Every 06-04-02-2 new addition enriches, ultimately, the final document.

Remarkably, I have been energized significantly by this renewed effort on my part "to get it organized and get it on paper / micro-film / in a digital format." The most successful / productive work site for this recent initiative has been Room 302 City Hall. I will very soon move the master copy of my family history opus to 302 City Hall.

Martha's visit for the birds

Good-living guru swoops in for Bloom show

By JEFF LONG
Press Enterprise Writer

BLOOMSBURG — How in the world does a 10-year-old hockey fan from Carbondale get to be buddies with fine-living queen Martha Stewart?

Judging chickens in Bloomsburg, of course.

Donald Powell went with his uncle to pick Stewart up at the Avoca airport early Saturday morning, and he got to know the famous homemaker during the ride back to Bloomsburg for a poultry show.

Later, she bought him a duck.

Stewart was in town taping a segment for one of her television shows at the semi-annual convention of the American Poultry Association and American Bantam Association.

This year, the event was sponsored by the Central Pennsylvania Avian Club. Donald's uncle, Robert, edits the club's newsletter and was the one who invited Stewart.

"She just became buddies with him when they rode together," said the boy's father, Donald Sr.

CENTER STAGE WITH CHICKENS — Homemaking mogul Martha Stewart, left, performs for a TV crew during her visit to the Bloomsburg Fairgrounds on Saturday.

Young Donald was grinning after spending the morning with Stewart. While at the show, Stewart was picking out "the prettiest chicken."

"I bought a duck, Harry," Stewart told a member of her TV crew. She nodded to Donald, who was at her side with the two. Please see MARTHA back page prettiest-chicken finalists. "I'm giving it to him as a present."

Martha

"That's a $100 bird," someone in the audience whispered.

"$150," surmised another.

Martha can afford it. An industry has grown up around her.

She has two television shows, edits a magazine named after her, and is the author of many books. The one-time stockbroker left the Wall Street rat race in 1973 to become a caterer. In the 24 years that followed, she has built a multi-million dollar business based primarily on her reputation as America's hostess.

Her first book was Martha Stewart Entertaining, in 1982. Since then, she's had nearly four million copies of books in print. Martha Stewart Living, a Time Inc. magazine, was launched in 1991. A syndicated television show, also entitled "Martha Stewart Living," is broadcast throughout the country.

She is chairman and CEO of Martha Stewart Living Enterprises, a division that will concentrate on producing more television specials, merchandising and other media projects.

"It's a very, very quality duck," said Donald's dad. "It's the most exotic of the waterfowl. It's the duck of China's royalty. A mandarin duck."

Curious fans treated Martha Stewart a little like royalty on the fairgrounds Saturday. So did her crew, tut-tutting reporters and photographers who asked to get a word with her about what the heck she was doing judging chickens in Bloomsburg.

"Martha's very busy," clucked one entourage member.

Another glared at Robert Lowe of Gettysburg, who was filming Stewart with his camcorder. He'd edged to the front of the crowd, but was told the video camera was too distracting. They asked him to stop. Now.

He edged back, out of sight.

"I never heard of her before in my life," Lowe admitted later. "But she's here. My wife wanted me to get her picture. She couldn't believe Martha Stewart was going to be here."

It's not all that surprising that Stewart came to Bloomsburg for the chicken show. She raises a breed of Chilean chickens known as Araucanas, which lay eggs in pastel shades like pale blue, green and ivory.

"I've seen her show where she runs out to the barn to pick up a few eggs and comes back and whips up a cake or something," said Donald Sr.'s cousin, Peg Winter, who was tickled to see young Donald's new friend in person.

Robert Powell said nature is what Martha is all about.

"She's very connected to the Earth, and animals and flowers and natural cycles," he said.

Although Donald is a hockey fan, the fourth-grader said he also likes watching Martha on television.

"I like to watch her painting, and doing work in the garden," he said. "I like to plant watermelons and fruits and stuff."

While professional judges were in town to award prizes based on detailed criteria, Stewart just chose the one she thought was prettiest: a white-crested blue Polish bantam hen.

"In honor of my mother, who is going to Poland this summer with her sister," Stewart explained.

The bird was raised by Joel and Ellen Henning, of Colden, N.Y.

Joel said raising good-looking chickens is a lot of fun.

"It's purely a hobby," he said. "I got started when I was 13. I was down to a friend's house and I just liked collecting the eggs."

He said having Martha Stewart come to the show is great publicity for a wholesome hobby. And he was proud that she picked one of his hens as the prettiest one around.

"I'm going to name her Martha," Joel said.

Comments

1. The Certificate of Qualification during its period of validity may be presented as evidence the holder is eligible for the provisional certificate and subsequent employment in schools of New York State wherein certification is required.
2. The provisional certificate may be obtained at any time the holder surrenders to the Teacher Certification Section the Certificate of Qualification during its period of validity providing Part A is completed by the certificate holder.
3. The provisional certificate must be obtained when the holder accepts a regular part-time or full-time position in the public schools of New York State. In such instance, the valid Certificate of Qualification must be submitted to the chief school officer of the employing school district who, upon completing Part B, will forward it to the Teacher Certification Section so that the provisional certificate can be forwarded to the employee.
4. The five-year validity of the provisional certificate will become effective upon its issuance. The holder must meet the requirements for permanent certification in effect at the time the provisional certificate is issued.
5. The Certificate of Qualification legalizes service as a substitute teacher and as a teaching assistant in the public schools in New York State except in the cities of New York City and Buffalo.

A. I herewith request the issuance of my provisional certificate with an effective date of September 1, 19 ☐ or February 1, 19 ☐ (Check one)

Merry Christmas 1998

Avant sa sortie matinale, "Le Précieux" se repose sur une natte circulaire de jonc. D'habitude, il prend une souris pour le petit déjeuner. (photo par S. Robert Powell)

This is Donald W. Powell II (official school picture, September 1998, Sixth Grade, Northley Middle School, Aston, PA). There are no cats in this photograph.

Les chiens ont l'habitude d'imiter les chats. Voici "Ranger-Spot," un chien intéressant, qui imite "Le Précieux" quand il se repose sur le divan. (photo par Holly Brown Ayers)

En été, "Griswold" aime se promener dans le jardin des fleurs. (photo par SRP)

C'était pendant son adolescence que "Griswold" (vous le voyez ici pendant l'automne en 1995) a pris l'habitude de se reposer dans des fauteuils. (photo par SRP)

Voici "Le Chat," à moitié endormi, dans sa boîte sur le radiateur dans la cuisine. Les chats rêvent souvent de souris et d'oiseaux. (photo par SRP)

Comme les paons, les chats ont des queues expressives. Voici "Le Précieux" au soleil, en train de faire des préparations pour une sieste. Remarquer la queue très expressive. (photo par SRP)

Un chat doit se rassurer au moins 15 fois par jour, surtout un chat délicat.

"Auction," comme garçon, se repose sur le four dans la cuisine. Il est important qu'un chat se repose au moins 20 heures par jour. (photo par SRP)

Aunt Eleanor

Eleanor Jones ("Aunt Eleanor," one of Mom's first cousins) was on the four or five most important influences on my entire development as an individual. In a dozen ways, she was an inspiration and "extra special." One of her many passions was ornithology and very early on she passed on that interest to my brothers and me. She gave a copy of the birdbook, Pennsylvania Birdlife by Hal H. Harrison (Pennsylvania Game Commission, January 1952), several pages of which are shown here, to each of us. Inside the front cover, in her unforgettable handwriting, she wrote: "Bobby / from / Eleanor P. Jones / ("Aunt Eleanor)." The book was published in 1952, so I was at least 9 when she gave me the copy of the book. My guess is that she purchased copies of the book for distribution as soon as it was published. In any event, the impact of the book was immediate and strong. Fifty or more years later (now) I could probably draw from memory the bird charts/photos on pp. 34-39, shown here. Last night (08-01-2009) I was looking for something in a filing cabinet at home and came across my copy of the book. I immediately turned to the bird chart pages (34-39) and the memory doors were thrown wide open! What a thrill! These same bird charts were, in full-size poster form, on the walls of Apokeepsink (Aunt Eleanor and Joey's country retreat on Four-Mile Pond in Wayne County). As I look at these charts, I can say with assurance that my favorite of the six of them is the Game Bird chart.

Two interesting Internet finds by John V. Buberniak in recent days:

1. The article from the October 9, 2009 Scranton Times-Tribune on the 180th anniversary of the opening of the D&H Gravity Railroad was picked up by the United Transportation Union and posted on their website www.utu.org. Given immediately hereafter is the article from the UTU website.

2. On Google a couple of days ago, my Master's Thesis on Emile Zola and my book on the schools of northeastern Pennsylvania appeared in a Google search that John Buberniak did on "Silas Robert Powell." Most amazingly, the fact that Dr. Frey quoted me (on p. 61) in his book on the aesthetics of the Rougon-Macquart also comes up in the Google search.

D&H railroad marks 180 years

CARBONDALE, Pa. -- Founders of the Delaware & Hudson Canal Co. launched more than coal cars when they opened a railroad system in Carbondale 180 years ago today, according to a local historian, and reported by The Times-Tribune.

"It just changed everything," said S. Robert Powell, who will host a ceremony at noon today commemorating the railroad's anniversary.

The ceremony will take place at the former site of Plane No. 1 -- behind the Ben-Mar restaurant off North Main Street -- where cars began the 16-mile trip to Honesdale over an "unbelievable series of inclines," he said. The building that houses the Ben-Mar was formerly one of the main office buildings for the D&H.

As the anthracite rolled out, European immigrants rolled in, transforming the city into a "thriving metropolis," he said.

"They came here by the tens of thousands," he said, snatching up railroad and mining jobs worth double the pay they received back home. They opened stores and built homes and churches. Some, like the First United Methodist Church and St. Rose of Lima, are still standing today.

D&H founders Maurice and William Wurts used their $3 million investment to transport coal to the northeast, where it literally fueled the region's prosperity.

At its peak, the company exported 2,000 coal cars a day, and a million tons of coal per year. It became the country's first multimillion-dollar corporation, he said.

The length of the railroad far outstripped existing lines -- no more than 10 miles of track had been laid anywhere in America at the time, Mr. Powell said.

It was opened the year before the famed Baltimore & Ohio -- B&O -- railroad, and also bested a similar operation in Jim Thorpe, he said.

Though Mr. Powell admits he has a strong sense of pride when it comes to Carbondale, he said that doesn't change the facts about the city's history. "This is the home of railroading in America, really," he said.

(The preceding article by Cecilia Baress was published October 9, 2009, by The Times-Tribune.)

Subject: Excellent publicity

11-02-09

John:

The story on the Gravity 180 commemorative ceremony was picked up nationally from the Scranton Times by the United Transportation Union (there are 125,000 members in that union)!

It is on their website. Here is the link:

http://www.utu.org/worksite/detail_news.cfm?ArticleID=49263

http://www.utu.org/print_news.cfm?ArticleID=49263

This is exactly the kind of publicity that will help get the word around about Carbondale's importance in national industrial/transportation history.

Gravity Railroad, first mayor featured

The Carbondale Historical Society will begin the new year by making history.

On Sunday, Jan. 3, the Society will co-sponsor and host the dedication of a state historical marker commemorating the Delaware and Hudson Gravity Railroad. The official dedication is set for 2 p.m. at the monument in Gravity Park on Garfield Ave. Following the ceremony, there will be a program about the Gravity Railroad and a reception in Council Chambers at City Hall. The public is invited.

Other sponsors of the event include the Pennsylvania Historical and Museum Commission, Lackawanna Heritage Valley Authority, the Lackawanna Historical Society, the Wayne County Historical Society, and the City of Carbondale.

The Society's other emphasis on local history will be the selling of 3" X 5" note cards featuring a color portrait of Carbondale's first mayor, James Archbald. The notecards are available in packs of 10 with envelopes for $5.

Mayor James Archbald is face on notecards

To purchase the notecards, call the Society at 282-0385, or they are available at Reynolds Gift Shop, Roselle Dept. Store, Ros-Al Studio, the Carbondale Public Library, Marian Community Hospital Gift Shop, and City Hall. To order by mail, add $1 for one or two packs, or $2 for three or more for shipping, and write to Carbondale Historical Society, P.O. Box 151, Carbondale, PA 18407.
